Wednesday, May 28, 2008

Irvine, California, Impac Mortgage Holdings, Inc. (NYSE: IMH), or the "Company" a Maryland corporation, being taxed as a real estate investment trust ("REIT"), is considering making an offer to the holders of its Series B and C Preferred Stock to exchange those shares for common stock of the Company. The Company has included within its preliminary proxy statement a request for common stockholders to approve the issuance of common stock in excess of 20% of the outstanding shares in connection with the possibility of such an exchange. If approved, and if completed, it would reduce the Company's continuing obligation to pay or accrue quarterly preferred dividends, thereby allowing the Company to use or preserve the cash for other purposes. Further, if completed on favorable terms it may have the effect of increasing book value for common stockholders.

Mr. Joseph R. Tomkinson, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Impac Mortgage Holdings, Inc stated, ". . . Additionally the possible exchange offer to swap preferred for common stock could have a very positive effect on the liquidity of the Company.
