Vodafone Launches Firsts Programme To Inspire People To Do Something Remarkable For The First Time Using Mobile Technology

14 January 2014

- From women's self-defence in India to surfing the world's most dangerous wave, Vodafone is inspiring people to achieve great things for the first time
- Olympic medallist Mary Kom wants to help women across India defend themselves; musician Spoek Mathambo has created a unique music track; and surfer Tom Lowe is tracking down the mighty Todos Santos wave

The Vodafone Firsts programme, launched today, is about inspiring people - no matter their age or where they come from - to do something remarkable for the first time using mobile technology.

When Vodafone asked champion boxer Mary Kom what she wanted to do for the first time, she said she wanted to help women across India learn to defend themselves. Using mobile technology and connecting Kom with the right people, Vodafone is helping to make the 30-year-old Olympian's ambition a reality. Vodafone is working with Kom to teach young women the mental and physical skills needed to improve their self-confidence and to defend themselves.

Vodafone worked with Kom to build and run a women-only boxing and self-defence camp in her native Manipur. A film of Kom's inspirational journey was created, which can be viewed at www.firsts.com and will be part of a self-defence smartphone app currently under development. For women in India without smartphones, Vodafone is helping Kom create a free SMS service, which will provide women across India with access to security and self-defence tips, a nationwide forum and women's helpline numbers.

Within days, leading big-wave British surfer Tom Lowe will use mobile technology to track down one of the world's most dangerous waves, the Todos Santos wave at the northern tip of Baja California, Mexico, and also to help him to stay in touch with his family back home in Cornwall in the UK. Vodafone will help the 30-year-old use a global ocean forecasting system on his tablet to help him locate the wave before jumping on to his surfboard and attempting to ride it. Lowe, who believes he will be the first European to ride the wave, will travel by plane, car, boat, foot and surfboard to reach Todos Santos.

Vodafone is also helping South African musician Spoek Mathambo to achieve his dream of creating his first recording using collected audio samples from different cultural groups across South Africa. Mathambo embarked on a journey around the country, meeting and playing music with three distinctly different communities to produce one unified piece of music. Mathambo uploaded his musical collaborations on to the Vodafone Cloud. He then used the Vodacom network to connect to the cloud service and to contact his colleagues who were mixing the track back in his studio in Cape Town.

These are just a few of the Vodafone Firsts that will be made a reality for people around the world as part of the global programme, which follows on from the world's first multi-sensory fireworks display in London on New Year's Eve. *

The journey of each Vodafone First can be viewed at www.firsts.com. More stories coming soon include the world's first: crowd-sourced theatre production, colour-conducted choir and singing forest.

Later in 2014, we will be asking people to tell us what they want to do for the first time and details will be shared on Firsts.com.

Barbara Haase, Vodafone Group Brand Director, said: Vodafone Firsts is about personal innovation and inspiring people to think in a new way. Mobile technology has changed so much about our lives in a relatively short time frame, from being able to plan a journey in seconds to helping people achieve their ambitions.

About Vodafone Firsts

Vodafone Firsts is Vodafone's global brand programme, activated across the world from 2014. A social media-led programme, Vodafone Firsts is about inspiring people to do something remarkable for the first time using mobile technology. Vodafone began by recruiting a series of inspirational people to help them achieve their Firsts. Vodafone will also ask consumers what they would like to do for the first time, helping to make their ambitions a reality.

About Vodafone

Vodafone is one of the world's largest telecommunications companies with approximately 411 million customers in its controlled and jointly controlled markets as of 30 September 2013. Vodafone has equity interests in telecommunications operations in nearly 30 countries and around 50 partner networks worldwide.

HAT TRICK OF TOP RATINGS FOR VODAFONE M2M

For the third year in a row Vodafone's Machine- to- Machine (M2M) services topped the rankings in Analysys Mason's independent M2M annual scorecard.

The third instalment of Analysys Mason's M2M Carrier Scorecard rates each of the leading communications service providers (CSPs) against a common set of six M2M categories; covering service, strategy as well as network and standards. Analysys Mason praised Vodafone for its vision and ambition, while in regards to customer experience management the company excelled.

M2M services are the 'internet of things', helping to create more connected environments and enabling objects to exchange information in real-time. For more than 20 years, Vodafone has connected M2M customers globally and is powering some of the world's most prominent and successful M2M deployments, which include BMW, Amazon and TomTom.

Commenting on the scorecard, Vodafone's Director of M2M Erik Brenneis said 'This report recognises the effort and focus of our team and highlights the importance of customer experience as a differentiator in this market. As a recognised global leader, we are proud to set the standards for customer service in the M2M market.'

Analysys Mason is an independent research and consulting company specialising in rigorous and unbiased analysis of the telecoms industry.

Morgan Mullooly, Analyst for Analysys Mason's Enterprise and M2M research stream, said 'The global outlook for Vodafone's M2M business is very positive. We are impressed with its focus on Customer Experience Management and by the way it is adapting to local requirements in countries such as Brazil to realise the huge potential in these markets.'

VODAFONE ANNOUNCES AGREEMENT FOR INTEGRATED COMMUNICATIONS WITH PREMIER FOODS

Vodafone announces today a five year agreement with Premier Foods, manufacturer of brands such as Batchelors, Bisto and Mr. Kipling, to become the Company's fully integrated communications partner.

The multi-million pound contract covers fixed and mobile voice services and an upgraded, managed network linking all of Premier Foods' sites. Mark Vickery, Group Information Services and Change Director for Premier Foods, said, "I see this single source agreement as an important step in supporting the Company's plans to simplify the organisation, improve operational efficiencies and enhance collaboration."

Gavin Darby, Chief Executive Officer of Premier Foods, said:

"Reducing complexity is a key part of our strategy to drive growth. By continually improving our efficiency and effectiveness we will be better able to meet customer needs. I am delighted to be working with Vodafone who will deliver the right integrated communications platform to support our future growth."

Vodafone Global Enterprise, Chief Executive, Jan Geldmacher, added:

"By creating a combined communications service for Premier Foods we can help to realise further value from within their business and achieve their growth ambitions. We believe that our agreement will quickly become a powerful and productive partnership and one which highlights the benefits of integrated communications."
