First Data and Concord Say DOJ Action will Decrease Competition,

Increase Prices for Merchants and Consumers

DENVER and Memphis, Tenn. October 23, 2003 First Data (NYSE: FDC) and Concord EFS (NYSE: CE) today characterized the complaint filed by the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) challenging First Data's merger with Concord as inaccurate and ill-advised and vowed to vigorously defend the transaction in court. The DOJ filed its suit earlier today in an effort to block the transaction. First Data and Concord officials said they are prepared to proceed quickly with the case and will ask the Court to rule on the Justice Department's request to enjoin the deal well in advance of the January 31, 2004 termination date in the First Data and Concord merger agreement.

The companies intend to hold their previously scheduled shareholder meetings on October 28.

The DOJ appears to have focused its opposition to the transaction on the combination of the NYCE network, which is majority owned by First Data, and the STAR network, owned by Concord. While those networks carry PIN debit transactions at both the point-of-sale (POS) and ATMs, the DOJ's complaint is limited to the alleged market for PIN debit services at the POS.

First Data has continuously stressed that this merger is about choice, voice and innovation: greater choice for consumers and merchants through the expansion of PIN debit; greater voice for merchants and banks in shaping the developing of new products, and greater scale that will result in lower prices and enable investment in innovation to the benefit of the payments marketplace as a whole.

Edgar Filing: CONCORD EFS INC - Form 425

Charlie Fote, chairman and chief executive officer of First Data said, "Today, the Department of Justice elected to decrease competition and increase prices for consumers and merchants. The DOJ's complaint is both inaccurate and ill-advised and could have severe detrimental impacts in the payments marketplace. It seems that the DOJ has either misinterpreted or ignored both rapidly changing industry dynamics as well as a common-sense interpretation of a marketplace that clearly encompasses both PIN and signature debit. For instance, they seem to have ignored recent wins by competitors for some of the largest banks in the U.S."

"I find it ironic that the DOJ is acting against a transaction where the combined company would handle less than 45% of PIN debit transactions, when only two years ago, the DOJ approved Concord's acquisition of STAR, which resulted in Concord handling approximately 60% of exactly the same transactions," Fote added. "We are disappointed that the DOJ chose this course, and rejected our offer earlier today to meet with them. We believe the government's case is without merit, and we look forward to proving that in court."
